BLACK LENTIL FROM LEONFORTE

The Black Lentil, grown in the province of Enna, is an ancient cultivation which is typical of this land. Its properties make it an extremely appreciated and refined legume, it includes an higher percentage of proteins and a lower fat content but nonetheless starting on the end of the Second World War a significant decrease in production occurred because other cultivations were born, made more productive and profitable by mechanical manufacturing. The black lentil plant has a horizontal development short stem nearly touching the ground, this makes the crop mechanisation and the following stages of processing almost impossible, in order to cope with this condition methods uncovering the ancient Sicilian rural tradition were employed.

EXTRA JAM AND FROM LEO

The late Peach of Leonforte IGP,
also called "Settembrina"
is a fruit grown in Leonforte
and in the territories of neighboring municipalities,
whose late harvest, between late summer and early autumn,
follows a particular cultivation technique.
The main feature that distinguishes peaches in Leonforte
is the practice of bagging individual fruits,
still on the tree, starting from the second half of June.
The fruit is naturally protected inside its parchment paper bag
that will accompany it until it is completely ripe.

This practice avoids having to intervene
with antiparasitic products ensuring the production of fruits free from defects or external imperfections.

The fruit is yellow, with red streaks,
with a very sweet pulp,
which lends itself to the preparation of Jams and Syrup Peaches.

SYRUP PEACHES
CONFORTE

The history and the taste of "Terre di Chiesa" legumes are old as time it self. In the cold winters, in fact, during nearly the year one thousand, some monks located in the humble church of Contrada Piano Comune started, as well as in many other abbeys, to grow legumes as a source of livelihood and to turn their kitchens into places of food experimentation.

It is precisely this centuries-long tradition throughout which "Terre di Chiesa" legumes were born, as products inseparably linked to the region of production, free of artificial additives and totally genuine and organic.

Tradition, today synonymous of quality, which is embodied in the hands of those who work raw materials, "Azienda Agricola Mulinello" which still preserves intact the quality, genuineness and rigor of this unforgettable product.

Thanks to the passion and attachment to the territory, "Mulinello" has decided to expand its product portfolio aiming at enhancing the products based on Leoforte's peach.

The Settembrina peach in fact is characterized by its intense aroma and the genuineness that gives it the maturation inside the bag, unique in its kind.
